(Apart from above mentioned 6 points, reviewers are free to provide additional suggestions/comments)	1. The manuscript important for the scientific community. As written in this article, this review provides insights into how distance learning programs are shaping the future of education on a global scale. Additionally, it discusses the implications for policymakers, educators, and students, highlighting the potential of distance learning to bridge educational gaps, promote inclusivity, and empower individuals to pursue education regardless of their geographical location or socioeconomic circumstances. 2. Title. Could we improve upon "A comprehensive Review on Role of Distance Learning Program towards the Development of Global Education System". This title contains 16 words. Maybe too long. As in several examples of articles in this journal, the number of words in the title is no more than 14 words. The key word " A comprehensive Review on " is not useful. Please consider these suggestions: Role of Distance Learning Program towards the Development of Global Education System. 3. The abstract is concise and informative. The author has briefly explained the aim of the work, techniques and methods used, main findings with important data and conclusions. 4. Overall, the subsections and structure of the manuscript are in accordance with the Author Guidelines in this journal. However, it would be nice if some subsections were displayed clearly. It is necessary to indicate where the methods, results and discussion. 5. The manuscript is scientifically correct 6. The references used meet the criteria of a scientific journal and are mostly taken from recent articles. Recommendation: Accept subject to minor revisions	Corrected Corrected Revision made
