

Editor's Comment:

The title of the manuscript is not appropriate. It should be: "Antibiotic sensitivity of pathogenic bacteria associated with subclinical mastitis of dairy cows in the Poro Region of the Ivory Coast"

By the way there are a lot of writing errors specifically the name of the microorganisms for instance Escherichia Coli, the species name of the bacteria will not be capitalized (correct writing Escherichia coli this is a basic knowledge for undergraduate students!). Or the name of the medium used for the isolation of the microorganisms i.e. Baird-Parker not Baird Packer etc.

There is no references given for the bacteriological analysis and CASFM is not a widely used international test for antimicrobial sensitivity testing

The whole manuscript will be checked by authors and a native speaker to eliminate all writing errors.

I am sorry to write you that the reviewers are not sufficient to review the manuscript then they do not make any scientific critics, comments or express their ideas or opinions to improve the scientific quality of the manuscript as well the visibility of the Journal.

You better find good experts to review and assess the manuscripts.

After revising the points the manuscript can be accepted for publication.
