Given the critical role of the Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development (MLGRD) in Zambia's socioeconomic development, understanding its effectiveness in Kabwe District provides valuable insights into the broader challenges and opportunities within the local government framework. Located in the Central Province of Zambia, Kabwe District is a significant administrative and economic hub with a diverse population and a mix of urban and rural communities. Its strategic position presents unique challenges and opportunities for local governance. As with many districts in Zambia, Kabwe faces issues such as rapid urbanization, inadequate infrastructure, unemployment, and the need for sustainable rural development. The MLGRD is tasked with addressing these challenges by empowering the Kabwe Municipal Council and supporting community-led development initiatives. The study also seeks to highlight best practices, identify gaps, and propose actionable recommendations to strengthen governance and development in the district.

The paper explores how decentralization, especially in terms of administrative, fiscal, and political decentralization, impacts the capacity of local government structures in fulfilling their developmental mandates. The study identifies several strengths and weaknesses of the decentralization policy, particularly with regard to the empowerment of local governments to address rural development challenges. The review approach enables a comprehensive understanding of the Ministry's functions, challenges, and impacts through the examination of relevant academic publications, government reports, legal frameworks, and development agency documents. A systematic review of literature was conducted which emphasize the importance of selecting, evaluating, and synthesizing credible and relevant sources to draw meaningful insights.
