

Editor's Comment:

The study uses democratic-participant media theory the theoretical foundation. The survey research approach is employed to collect empirical data. Findings reveal that about 59 per cent respondents perceived citizen journalism as not reliable when it comes to source of information for news as citizen journalists are not well disposed to carry out journalism job properly. The author has carefully revised the paper as per the suggestions of the reviewers. References, research questions, objectives, methodology, data analysis and conclusion parts are well put in place.
