Compulsory REVISION comments	Latest information about Cuba biotechnology post Covid pandemic.	After COVID pandemic, clinical development has been focussed on coronavirus vaccines for children, generating an interesting question: How was it possible? Developing biotechnology in a poor country requires the participation of the government in social and economic investment, collaboration across all sectors, coordination between institutions, suitable intellectual property policy, project planning, and rational resource allocation. Taking into account the complexity of this process, and the country's characteristics, following exactly the same pathway should not be recommended, but this approach could be feasible for developing countries. The pipeline shown in Table 1 represents an opened pathway to perform early-stage associations for joint development, and sharing commercial opportunities, according to flexible business structures, and international trade practices.
Minor REVISION comments
Optional/General comments
