Compulsory REVISION comments	Dear Sirs This interesting paper deals with HSV1-2 seroprevalence in certain women group. Aim, methodology, results and discussion cover the subject in detail and provide Useful information for every day medical practise.	Author feels elated about the encouraging comment on the paper.
Minor REVISION comments	It would be enlightening to discuss the impact of Covid-19 infection on STI-predisposed women WITH RESPECT OF CO-INFECTION WITH HSV1,2	The Author is of the opinion that the modes of transmission, pathogenesis and clinical presentations of both Covid-19 and HSV mediated STIs are completely different and comparison between these two would be out of scope of this study. This paper has already made a comprehensive comparative study of HSV genital infections and other viral STIs.
Optional/General comments
