Optional/General comments	The case report “An Atypical Presentation of Vitamin B12 Deficiency with Hemolytic Anemia” is a well prepared and very interesting paper. The author has clearly stated that vitamin deficiency causes various complications, including haemolytic anaemia and neurological impairment. This patient has already developed peripheral neuropathy and unsteadiness of gait. Therefore, early detection of vitamin B12 deficiency and treatment is essential. In this article the aetiology of vitamin B12 deficiency remains obscure. In may happen sometimes in strict vegetarians (unlikely to be in this case). I believe that this paper is useful. I therefore, recommend that this article should be accepted for publication in its current form.	Comment accepted and considered
