Compulsory REVISION comments
Minor REVISION comments	The paper deals with the effects of magnesium and organic manures on yield and nutrient uptake of cotton (Gossypium hirsutum L.). The subject is very original and presents an opportunity for agriculture to increase their production and best conserve the soil. The parts of the paper are well written but there are remarks to indicate, especially the author must try not to use abbreviations in the abstract part, and also for the first quotation. In the experimental part it is preferable to present the devices and the concentrations of the nutrients in the form of a table. In the results part it is necessary to indicate the tables in each part, in addition in certain part it is necessary to deeper more the interpretation of the results while referring to recent references. In general the paper needs these minor changes to be accepted.	Revision made Done
