This is one of the limitations of this study. This was because, the reviewers had access to databases not beyond 2016. However, we are making frantic effort to do a systematic review to include articles from 2001 to 2022.
Minor REVISION comments	It is best to include the references used in the systematic review in a table as an appendix. It is necessary to mention in this table the necessary variables such as the name of the researchers, the type of study, the place of study, etc.	Thanks. We have included the table as an appendix.
