Compulsory REVISION comments	✓ INTRODUCTION The literature is not well synthesized; All statement is obtained from few literature (only three reference). More over most of the references are old, they cannot tell us the current practice. It is too short. Please focus and rewrite the introduction as follow and don't go beyond one and a half page: Paragraph 1: Definition and description of the outcome variable Paragraph 2: Background of the outcome variable including rationale and direction of WHO/FMOH on your study Paragraph 3: major problem/success related to the outcome variable Paragraph 4: What others did to solve the problem with argument on method section Paragraph 5: Gap you identified with justification Paragraph 6: Your intention on how to minimize the gap with justification Some of the sentences in the result part is unclear. Rewrite it The manuscript requires English language copy editing. A lot of grammar errors. Most of your references are too old. Please try to replace with articles published within the last five years.	This is a journal article, not a dissertation or thesis. The problem of diabetes and its burden, the abuse of herbal products because they are considered natural and safe is captured in the introduction. Also captured is the justification, a lack of regulation of herbal remedies, hence this study. The old references are those of methods of analysis of parameters, which are cited. These are the original articles of the methods. Most still cite them and even the new methods are only adaptations of the old. Newer references are cited in the discussion, that compares the work to recent studies in similar fields. Thanks for your input. Corrections effected where necessary.
