Compulsory REVISION comments	<ol style="list-style-type: none">1. This is a case report. We never refer to the patient with they real name.2. The article is written in a way that addresses to common people and medical doctors. This paper refers to doctors that already know what necrotized pancreatitis is. Two paragraphs explaining this, is too much.3. The way of presentation of medical history and results of determinations is very different of the way we usually present a case in an article (see PubMed).4. "General parameter"? this is not a paragraph. Cannot stand like nthis in the text5. "Integumentary"?6. "Myoskeletal system: he was normal and BMI" !!?? The while paragraph needs rephrasing7. Table I. This cannot be a title heading.8. In the "pharmacological management" medication is never presented like this. Well known info is presented here, without being needed.9. Nursing management: in this section directions are given (absurd !!) using bullets (!)10. All the case report is actually presented in the Discussion, in an actually summarized way.	All the necessary corrections were done as indicated
