Optional/General comments	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Do you think 206 people as a sample size is enough to draw a conclusion? In my opinion, this is very much below a representative numberI think that age alone as a criterion for selecting respondents is insufficient.The reliability of the result must take into account other criteria such as the socio-economic level or the educational levelA person's medical history greatly influences their decision. Criterion not considered in this studyThe way of life of the elements of the sample (living in urban or rural areas) also influences the decision to conform to the standards or not.Perhaps it would be better to insist on long-term collective health education alongside police repression as you suggest.
