1	The criteria for inclusion and exclusion of patients selected for reconstruction with the groin flap are missing. In fact, the groin flap is mainly used for the reconstruction of large cutaneous deficits of the back of the hand and sometimes for the reconstruction of the back of the fingers. Furthermore is also missing the description of the limits connected to the reconstruction with groin flap which prevents the use of the hand before the detachment of the pedicle at 21 days (average) from the first intervention and the bulky due to excess tissue after reconstruction. A complete revision of English of the paper is necessary.
Minor REVISION comments	revision of captions and images (missing letters in images, Figure 5)
Optional/General comments
