Compulsory REVISION comments	The paper is well structured and presents a precise and well structured analysis. The paper is well structured and already in the abstract immerses the reader in the investigation object of the paper. It highlights that high heritability combined with high genetic gain suggests a significant role for additive gene action in the regulation of these traits and suggests using simple selection as a breeding method to enhance these traits. Good both the introduction and the body of the work. The conclusions are also very interesting. The bibliography is complete and allows the reader to deepen the subject of the investigation. Even on a graphic level, the work is smooth and does not become heavy when reading.
