Minor REVISION comments
Optional/General comments	This research article is original research work conducted on Dalbergia sissoo agrisilviculture model in 2020-21. Diffrent pruning densities and its effect on timber production, carbon sequestration were studied. This paper has clearly defined objectives. The methodology and experiments were conducted based on established Research process. Variations among different pruning intensities were found and correlated with Biomass production and carbon sequestration. The conclusions are based on research findings are justified
