Compulsory REVISION comments	Phenotypic characterization of breeding material is of prime importance for selection of a improved variety. As such, the work bears merit. But the author has written the manuscript very poorly. The Introduction is not sufficient to address the problem identified, materials and methods are not fully described, results on the qualitative and qualitative characteristics of the germplasms are missing as well as the discussion of the concluding statement or the findings are missing. Therefore, I found the manuscript with repairable deficiencies and may be reconsidered . Specific comments are mentioned on the body of the manuscript.
