Compulsory REVISION comments	kind author, the distribution of therapy is not well understood in this article. which patients (in terms of oxygen requirements, age or comorbidities) have received certain therapies. for this reason I cannot understand how the benefit of each single therapy is calculated in the patient's outcome. only for methylprednsone a reduction in mortality is mentioned.
Minor REVISION comments	Regarding the claim: This study shows that despite the fact that kidney problems were rare, kidney function tests were performed in significant numbers in hospitalized cases. I believe it is not necessary to emphasize this concept, as a kidney function test must be performed before the start of therapy with hydroxychloroquine or remdesivir
Optional/General comments
